Description

An unusual pair of wood, metal and textile Victorian, Print Rollers Upcycled into 27½ high Lamps

- Dating from the mid-19th century this pair of print rollers were used to block print wallpapers. Individual rollers were used to print different colours.

- The raised metal and textile, geometric design creates a deep relief and a 3 dimensional effect which is unusual in lamps. - The height gives these lamps gravitas translating into statement pieces within an interior. - Juxtapose with period interiors and blend into modern and contemporary schemes. - The contrasting honey colour of the varnished wood and grey metal and textile are warm and harmonise with most colour schemes. - Minimal surface wear to the varnished patina on the edges which is untouched and can be retouched in if preferred - The conversion is recent so they conform to UK PAT Electrical standards.
